SOLIDARITY

WITH HEALTH WORKERS ACTION!

The Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) extends its solidarity with health care workers and shared its concerns following proposed cuts within the health and social care trusts across the six counties.

It is believed that trusts are expected to make cuts of up to 12% throughout the health service.

As Health Workers gathered at locations across the North to protest at the announcement, a spokesperson for the IWW Ireland Branch said, "This should be viewed as yet another attack on our health Service and upon working class communities, no matter how they try and dress it up."

"At a time when our health services are being decimated, it is important that all public sector workers mobilise against it."

"We believe it is crucial that we stand alongside all workers fighting against further cuts to jobs and services, whether that's within the health sector or the transport sector."

Speaking to fellow workers in Belfast during today's protest actions against proposed cuts, one member commented that, "Most people believe that both Stormont and Westminster are deliberately allowing this to happen."

"Running down services, in order to pave the way for the private sector to step in and feed off whatever is left. It's not on".

An IWW spokesperson in Derry said, "Workers are here in protest as they believe that this cannot be allowed to happen. The trade union movement, as we speak, is preparing that fight back, and we fully extend our solidarity."

"It is unacceptable that our health workers will be subjected to further cuts and a promised living wage deliberately withheld from them."

"This will not only have an impact on the health sector jobs but within every working class home across the north."

"Greater worker's solidarity is required to defeat any attempt by bosses to destroy our health services."

IWW SPEAK OUT AGAINST RACISM: RACIST GRAFFITI ATTACKS CONDEMNED

The Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) in Belfast has condemned recent racist graffiti that appeared in Holywood, Co Down.

In a statement issued early today, an IWW spokesperson said, "On behalf of our union, we totally condemn these isolated hate attacks as both anti community and anti worker.

"The membership of the IWW across county Down, is made up of workers from every part of the country and beyond these shores. They are workers who take care of our elderly relatives.

"They help look after our relatives when we are vulnerable and sick. They are our public sector workers who form part of our community. They are the backbone of our communities. An attack upon one, is an attack on all of us.

"As a union, we believe that every worker deserves our respect and support no matter what colour of skin they may have. What sexual preference or religion they may have or not have.

"Those who seek to divide us as workers are anti worker. They are anti community, and we reject you and your agenda of division and hate.

"Wherever we see racist graffiti on the streets where we live. It is the duty of all of us to remove it. Wherever there is acts of intimidation, as workers and as a community, it is up to all of us to show unity and solidarity, to stand side-by-side each other.

"Racist graffiti that has appeared in a shared space is a reminder of the shameful racist rioting witnessed over the last few summers. Reports of some in our communities, as well as far right tourists from England, participating in pogroms directed against some of the most vulnerable members of our communities, went round the world, and made us look like the worst of humanity.

"To those who witness such behaviour should know that there are good people here who reject this behaviour. This minority, of racists and fascists, do not represent nor speak for us. Our communities are open and welcoming, and have for years been integrated and peaceful. As workers, we condemn those who seek to divide workers and our communities."

IWW Solidarity With Artists Fighting Back!

The Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) in Derry extends its support and solidarity to artists in the city ahead of planned protests organised by workers in the arts and creative sector.

An IWW spokesperson in Derry said: "On behalf of the Industrial Workers of the World, we would like to extend our solidarity with artists locally and call upon the people of Derry to support artists who are simply demanding better for workers within the arts industry.

"Without doubt, artists and creatives across the city have been short-changed. "Whether that's in terms of pay and conditions, safe guarding, or health and safety overall.

"The city will this year mark the 40th anniversary of Halloween festivities in Derry. "This is one of the main events within the city's tourism calendar, with a global reach that attracts thousands and generates equal amounts for the local economy.

"We have to recognise that if it wasn't for artists and creatives locally, this and other celebrations and festivals simply couldn't happen.

"Artists are workers, and workers have rights.
